City Attorney, Ms. Kate Swise, reviewed the applicant's materials and confirmed that everything was in order, with the checklist signed off by the Building Department, Fire Department and Police Departments.

Police Chief Seth Ranney noted that the name listed on the application was Cafe Cicero LLC. City Attorney Swise clarified that Cafe Cicero was the entity set to receive the license, but would operate under the name Golden Nugget Gaming Cafe.

Deputy Liquor Commissioner Adam Smith mentioned sending out a letter to inform license holders of the changes to the liquor code regarding the newly implemented tasting rider as some locations were conducting tastings without a rider. Police Chief Ranney felt that considering Schnuck's made $2.6M in liquor sales last year they should be required to apply for a Tasting Rider. It was agreed from the Commission that correspondence go out to the existing license holders making them aware of the changes to the liquor code.

Chief Ranney brought attention to the importance of regulating pouring and consumption on premises from the police department's perspective, expressing a vested interest in ensuring compliance. Chief Ranney also emphasized the need for voluntary compliance but acknowledged the commission's authority to enforce regulations when necessary.

Suggestions were made regarding communication methods for informing license holders of changes, including group mail or email, and potentially updating the city code.

Ms. Swise reiterated the responsibility of licensees in adhering to regulations.
